Concerned Citizens In Process Inaugurating Economic Boycott Of Multicare Medical Center

A broad-based coalition of concerned citizens announced that they are inaugurating a formal economic boycott of Multicare Medical Center until such time as Tacoma General Hospital ceases to offer its facilities for the purpose of aborting babies.

Group spokesperson, Delores Bennett, Pierce County Director of the Peoples Action Network, said that after T.G. had broken negotiations with their group and vigorously re-asserted a pro-choice position, that she and others felt that the hospital would no longer listen to moral, medical, psychological or theological arguments against abortion. What they will understand, Bennett stated, is money. "They are a business - the biggest business in town. Customers who choose to show their disapproval of abortion will merely be encouraged to shop elsewhere."

Bennett and her group became persuaded that the boycott would be effective after tabulating the results of an independent telephone survey on abortion in Pierce County.

The results of a random phone survey in which 213 people responded to a Data Net questionnaire indicated with a 95% confidence interval for the true population. that well over half (55 - 68%) of those surveyed are against abortion on demand. And while one-third (between 21.7 and 33.7%) of those contacted were not even aware that T.G. offered their facilities for the purpose of "terminating pregnancies", one-half of the respondents said that, "All other things being equal that they would definitely prefer to be treated at a hospital that does not provide facilities for abortion."

Furthermore, it is no surprise that in Pierce County, one of the only counties where the majority of voters were opposed to their tax dollars being spent on state-funded abortions (ref. poll results on Initiative 471, 1984 elections), that pollsters found that the percentage of those against abortion on demand with the exception of rape, incest or to save the mother's life, was well over 75% (74.2 - 92.4%). Noteworthy too is that even after dropping the "rape-incest" exclusion, results showed 63% still opposed abortion. "In other words", Bennet said, "The so-called 'vocal minority' is really the majority in Pierce County. Hopefully, the hospital will see the wisdom of not catering to radical pro-choice fringe groups that insist abortion on demand is what the public wants." "The public is starting to realize", said Bennett, "That when they say 'abortion is a matter between a woman and her doctor', they're forgetting someone."

Bennett stated repeatedly the group's overall admiration of Multicare. "It is only with regard to abortion that we object to their medical care. It is not our intention to hurt the hospital. We merely want to persuade them that it is in the best interest of the community, not to mention the best interest of babies, that Tacoma General stop serving as an abortion center in Pierce County."

Crime On The Rise In Tacoma

Tacoma Police Director Dean Phillips stated today that the rising crime rate in Tacoma and other cities in this area is of vital concern to law enforcement agencies and the citizens who live and work in the Northwest. Phillips said the 12.3% increase in total Part I Offenses has kept the police department hard pressed to cope with the demand for services in the City of Tacoma. He pointed out that the Tacoma Police Department is presently conducting a comprehensive study of crime in Tacoma which examines the various socio-economic factors which might exert influence in the overall crime picture.

Phillips has been addressing the issue of the department's effectiveness since he was appointed Director of Police in 1984. In 1984, a court injunction froze the hiring list, which resulted in a servere shortage of officers available to respond to calls for service. In addition to the number of officers lost through attrition, a study done by the International Association of Chiefs of Police revealed that the Tacoma Police Department was in need of 41 additional officers to adequately handle the increasing volume of calls.

When the hiring freeze was lifted late in 1984, department and city personnel worked quickly to replace those officers lost through attrition, and to hire many additional officers whose positions were created by the City Council. By the end of 1985, the Tacoma Police Department had reached a point at which officers could cope with the calls for service.

Burglary, which has been identified as Tacoma's major problem, is the crime of major emphasis in both the Criminal Investigations Division and the Patrol Division. Assaults have increased largely due to the new Domestic Violence Law, and the increase in rape still remains a difficult challenge. Since rape is a crime of opportunity, it is hoped that by continuing to alert the public to potentially dangerous situations and by having considerably more police units available to act as deterrents, the Tacoma Police Department will be able to impact the problem.

In closing, Director Phillips also felt the need to emphasize the number and quality of services available to citizens, free of charge, through the Crime Prevention Unit. "Without the willingness of the people to assist in deterring the criminal, our jobs as police officers become very difficult."

Seniors Misled By Insurance Selling Scheme

OLYMPIA: The state Insurance Commissioner's Office has put a stop to an apparent attempt to deceive senior citizens in Washington through official-looking mailings that were actually marketing forms. A cease and desist order has gon out preventing further mailings of the information of Washington's senior citizens.

The marketing effort involved promotional mailings from two alleged groups, the "Senior Security Benefit Service" and the "National Senior Advisory Center," both having the same Washington, D.C. address on the mailings. That address, however, was apparently only a "mail drop" for Senior Citizens Marketing Group, Inc., of Dallas, Texas.

The mailings concern Medicare supplement insurance and promise that persons sending in "response forms" will get free information about a special plan to pay costs not paid for by Medicare. No insurance company is mentioned in the malings, as required by Washington's laws, which also prohibit the advertising of insurance by anyone not licensed to sell it. None of the firms named are licensed to sell insurance in this state.

Consumer experts in Insurance Commissioner Dick Marquardt's office point out that official-looking envelopes and enclosures such as those used in the mailings, as well as the names of the alleged groups, would tend to deceive people into thinking they were official government mailings. State law prohibits "false, deceptive or misleading advertising insurance of the type referred to in the mailings.

The Insurance Commissioner's Consumer Protection Division has also alerted federal authorities to the marketing tactics of the Texas firm, since it appears that the scheme is being used in other parts of the country as well.

Hud To Insure $ 2.3 Billion In Mortages In 1986

William Y. Nishimura, Regional Housing Commissioner of HUD's Seattle office expects to do $2.3 billion of new mortgage insurance business this year.

In releasing the FHA single-family forecast for the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, and Alaska Nishimura said, "We have seen recent dramatic increases in our FHA mortgage insurance business - with new mortgages approved at a level 287% higher in the fourth quarter of 1985, than in 1984. For the next year we see more of the same. We at HUD are doing with fewer federal employees - we can really say we are doing more with less!"

The new FHA-forecast prepared by HUD's Region X Economists projects that interest rates will continue to fall reaching single digit levels (9.75%) in the last quarter of 1986.

The number of mortgages for single family housing insured by HUD in the four states is expected to reach well over 37,000 cases this year compared to only 9,100 cases in 1984 and 22,100 cases in 1985.

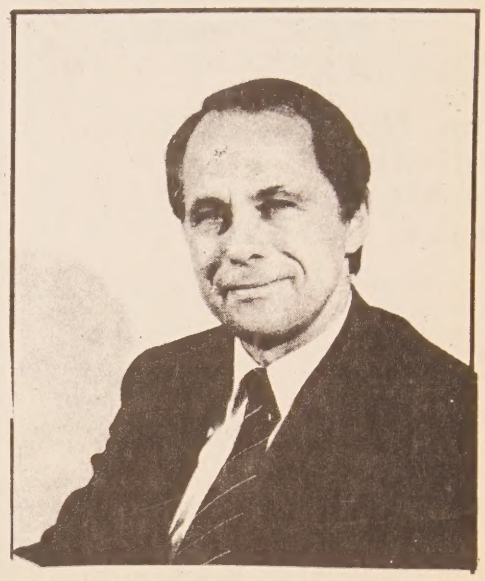
Mayor Sutherland Disapointed At Tribal Vote



Puyallup tribal majority speaks loud and clear even as if they were speaking from the graves of their ancestors and denouncing with an overwhelming vote against the proposal to sell their land rights which were first given by God and sanctioned by the Medicine Creek Treaty. It has been acknowledged by some of the elders of the tribal nation that their God-given land, which they lived, hunted and fished in the Puyallup and Pierce County area was not given to them to sell, but to cultivate for the [illegible] their people. And it has been noted by their people that it is part of mother [illegible] which all things de[illegible] the earth, hereby making the earth the mother of all mankind.

Therefore, as they state, in their ancient beliefs that is unrealistic to even think about selling their land which in essence is their mother. But most of it has been taken away by men of disbeliefs and the God-given rights of others.

Generations shall rise up and say that this was a heroic decision of that Puyallup nation. The Puyallup people are rejoicing in their hearts for the ones that had the courage to denounce the selling of their tribal lands, especially the heroic tribal council lady that stood up and said, "no, no, no", against all the odds and criticism from city fathers, even congressmen.

Time will come when all munipulations of Indian rights will stop and the rights of all human beings will unite in one great force to right the wrongs of unjustice and that all men, red men, black men, white men, jews, prodestants and catholics, all will [illegible] the fact that all men were created equal and all men have a right to that which God has given him. That freedom will surely ring even from every reservation and every metropolitan cities and country sides shall behold the freedom and respect [illegible] by

Words Of Wisdom

From The Desk Of The Publisher Apostle Bishop D. L. Brooks DDW

WHO HATH BELIEVED OUR REPORT? AND TO WHOM IS THE ARM OF THE LORD REVEALED?

FOR HE SHALL GROW UP BEFORE HIM AS A ROOT OUT OF THE GROUND.

HE HATH NO FORM OR COMTLINESS: AND WHEN WE SHALL SEE HIM, THERE . NO BEAUTY THAT WE SHOULD DESIRE HIM.

[illegible] CHAPTER

Now Moses kept the flock of Jethro his father in law, the priest of Midian: and he led the flock to the backside of the desert, and came to the mountain of God, even to Horeb.

And the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: and he looked, and, behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed.

And Moses said, I will now turn aside, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt.

And when the Lord saw that he turned aside, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt.

And when the Lord saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, Moses, Moses. And he said, Here am I.

And he said, Draw not nigh hither: put off thy shoes from of thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground.

Moreover he said, I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God.

And the Lord said, I have surely seen the affliction of my people which are in Egypt, and have heard their cry by reason of their taskmasters; for I know their sorrows;

And I am come down to deliver them out of the hand of Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that land unto a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey; unto the place of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites.

Now therefore, behold, the cry of the children of Israel is come unto me: and I have also seen the oppression wherewith the Egyptians oppress them.

Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharoah, that thou mayest bring forth my people the children of Israel out of Egypt.

And Moses said unto God, Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?

And he said, Certainly I will be with thee; and this shall be a token unto thee, that I have sent thee: When thou has brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain.

And Moses said unto God, Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say unto them, The God of our fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, What is his name? what shall I say unto them?

And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: and he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you.

And God said moreover unto Moses, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, The Lord God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath sent me unto you: this is my name for ever, and this is my memorial unto all generations.

Go, and gather the elders of Israel together, and say unto them, The Lord God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, appeared unto me, saying, I have surely visited you, and seen that which is done to you in Egypt:

And I have said, I will bring you up out of the affliction of Egypt unto the land of the Canaanites, and the Hitites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, unto a land flowing with milk and honey.

And they shall hearken to thy voice: and thou shalt come, thou and the elders of Israel, unto the king of Egypt, and ye shall say unto him, The Lord God of the Hebrews hath met with us: and now let us go, we beseech thee, three days' journey into the wilderness, that we may sacrifice to the Lord our God.

Beware The Lion

There is a lion at your door - he's been there before. No other lion can equal him in power and fierceness. He is a master-stalker when in pursuit of prey.

Other lions go but a little distance from their dens; but his circuit is the world itself. Other lions roam abroad at certain seasons only - night is their busy time; but this spiritual lion is perpetually in motion. The day and night are both alike to him. Other lions are blood thirsty and savage; but he hath no measure in his fury. He cannot possibly be satisfied unless all people are his prey. Other lions are visible and sometimes can be avoided. But he is an invisible being. He springs upon his prey unseen an unsuspected. The natural lion attacks his prey by open violence; but this spiritual lion deals rather by secret craft. The natural lion seeks only to devour the body; but the spiritual lion aims at the detruction of both the soul and body. The natural lion's strength is far greater than the strength of man, yet man has found out ways of overcoming him; but no power, no skill, no contrivances of man can enable him to overcome the spiritual lion our text speaks of. How then can a poor helpless sinner escape out of the snare of Satan? Our text has the answer.

The sinner, unless he repents, is always in the hand of the devil. But believers were saved at the cross.

"...For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that He might destroy the works of the devil." 1John3:8

"Submit yourselves, therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you." James 4:7

Though I must not hope, on earth, to be free from his temptations, how am I to resist this fearful adversary of my soul?

We are exhorted to sobriety - "Be sober." Be moderate - be self-denying. Let the Christian entangle himself in the things of this life, and Satan has him at a great advantage.

Our vigilance must be comprehensive. Many a city has been taken on its strongest side, which was counted so strong that no watch was kept, because no danger was expected there.

We think that we are not exposed to one particular form of temptation; let none be too sure of this; and in resisting one form of evil, never let us forget that there are others in the world.

Fleshly sins may be watched against, and yet room be given in the heart for spiritual wickedness, pride, self-righteousness, etc. The victories gained over the lusts of the flesh may minister to those subtler mischiefs of the spirit: and our fate be like that of the hero in the Maccabees, who was crushed by the falling elephant he, himself, had slain.

It matters not to Satan how he ruins us: whether we go down to hell as gross and carnal sinners, or as elated self-righteous saints. Therefore, you must set a watch all around your heart; not on one side only, but all around-for you can never be sure on which side temptation will assail.

Watch Against Little Sins:

As in the robbing of a house, it is the custom of thieves to put in some little boy at the window, who being once within may easily open the doors and let them in too, so the tempter, in rifling the soul, does not make his entrance by some gross sin, but employs a lesser sin, which will so unlock the bars of the conscience that the most enormous abominations shall in time make their entrance and take posession.

Let no man measure the smallness of his danger by the smallness of any sin. The smaller the sin, the greater the stratagem. Some have been choked by a fly, a crumb; even such small things carry in them the causes of death; and the soul may be destroyed by sinful desires, idle words, officious lies, as well as by perjuries, blasphemies, murders. When you consider in how many ways a soul may be ruined, it will put you on your best guard.

Watch Against Old Sins:

The embankment is weak it once gave away; and though the breach has been repaired, it must be watched diligently. The flames have been put out, but the ashes are still smoldering; and if the wind rises, the fire may burst forth anew. The rebellion has been put down; but though its armies have been scattered and its prince dethroned, many traitors lurk in secret places, watching for opportunities to renew the struggle. Our old sins are conquered, but not quite killed. Let your eye but rove a little; let your guard down, just one minute and the lion is upon you.

He is going about, not outside men, but in - inside of men; going about in the regions of human thoughts, human passions, human impulses, and human activities. He is not a sleeping lion, nor a lion crouching down, satiated with food, but a lion roaring with hunger, savage for food (YOU!).

FEBRUARY KICKS-OFF ALLERGY SEASON

Do you suffer from allergies? If so, you may want to stock up on tissue paper or better educate yourself about alergies. Allergy season starts at the end of February when trees and grasses begin to pollinate and continues until the first frost, usually in November.

Allergy rhinitis or hay fever affects approximately 60 million people or 20% of the nation's population. According to David Stempel, MD, an allergy specialist at the Mason Clinic, allergies may be passed on genetically and can develop almost any time during a person's life. While some people develop allergies during childhood, others live in the same environment for many years before experiencing allergy symptoms.

Allergy symptoms are very similar to those of a cold: runny or stuffy nose, irritated and red eyes, and head congestion. Nasal and eye itching may distinguish allergy symptoms from those of a cold. Allergy symptoms, which may last for six or more weeks, limit a person's ability to perform adequately. Adults may become tired and irritable. Children's school performance may decline. "Although allergies are not life-threatening, they certainly can make a person feel uncomfortable," says Stempel.

To relieve the discomforts of allergy symptoms, Stempel recommends several over-the-counter and prescription drugs. "People with mild symptoms can buy an antihistamine or antihistamine decongestion preparation at a drug store. Most brands are basically the same. However, read the labels carefully. Some medications cause drowsiness or may be inadvisable if you have other illnesses," says Stempel. "For more serious symptoms, an allergist can prescribe topical medications to treat specific areas of the body like the nose. Topical drugs virtually have no side effects and work very well. One drug called Cromolyn actually blocks the allergic reaction."

Although medications are helpful, allergy sufferers face days when airborne pollens are so heavy that drugs offer little relief. "There's no way of avoiding pollens unless you lock yourself indoors," says Stempel. "Learning about your allergies to better prepare yourself for the symptoms is the most effective treatment available."

THE NEW TV DINNERS

Frozen TV dinners have been around for ages, but a host of new products are growing in popularity to meet the demands of people with busy schedules. These pleasingly packaged frozen entrees, categorized as either "gourmet" or "calorie conscious", can be prepared in 8 to 15 minutes in a microwave or 10 to 40 minutes in a conventional oven.

How do they rate in flavor and nutrition? Opposite are the results of a survey compiled by nutritional expert Marilyn Guthrie, a registered dietitian at Virginia Mason medical Center. Guthrie's survey shows the approximate nutrient content and the results of an informal taste test for some of the newer fast food products on the market. Guthrie says that all are high in sodium and should be limited to occasional use.

Oil Help Expands, Includes Storm Windows

OLYMPIA, WA. -- Lois Mackey, of the Washington State Energy Office, announced today that Oil HELP has expanded to include storm and replacement windows.

"The storm windows are expected to be a popular addition to the Oil HELP Package," Mackey added.

Initiated in September 1985, Oil HELP (Heat Energy Loan Program) is this state's first weatherization opportunity created especially for oil heat users. Pierce is one of ten counties included in the pilot program.

The Washington State Energy Office, in cooperation with the Oil Heat Institute and participating credit unions, will pay all the interest on weatherization loans of up to $5,000. Storm windows now supplement the options covered by the loans, which include insulation, weatherstripping and furnace efficiency improvements.

Owners of oil heated homes or small businesses which were former residences located in Washington State are aligible for the interest-free loanss. The loans are available locally through Tapco Credit Union, 572-8700; and Pierce County Educational Employees Credit Union, 565-4413. For more information, contact either credit union or the Oil Heat Institute, 206/623-8730.

Bernice Morehead Named DSHS Division Director

Olympia -- Bernice Morehead, Region 5 administrator for the Department of Social and Health Services (DSHS), has been named acting director of the department's Division of Income Assistance, DSHS Secretary A.N. Shinpoch announced. The appointment is effective February 17.

Morehead will replace Judith Merchant, who has resigned to become director of financial assistance for the Michigan Department of Social Services.

Morehead has worked for DSHS since 1971 when she became a caseworker/home-maker coordinator in Tacoma. Subsequently she has held several positions with the department, including casework supervisor, Community Services program manager, service delivery coordinator and acting regional administrator. She has been region administrator since September, 1983. In that position she has supervised DSHS financial and adult services for Pierce and Kitsap Counties.

In her new position, Morehead will establish policies for distribution of cash benefits under categorical programs for aged, blind, disabled, incapacitated and deprived children with their needy relative. She will also be in charge of food stamp distribution for the department and of manpower programs which provide job search and placement for welfare recipients.

A native of Oxford, Mississippi, Morehead holds a Bachelor of Arts degree from Evergreen State College.

Merchant leaves DSHS after being director of the Division of Income Assistance since 1982. She previously was executive assistant to the Secretary and director of the Bureau of Alcohol and Substance Abuse. Mrs. Morehead is also a very active member of the Bethlehem Baptist Church.

State Agency Claims Right To Impose Standards On Religions School

If the U.S. Supreme rules that the Ohio Civil Rights Commission has jurisdiction over the hiring practices of Dayton Christian Schools, "it could broaden the government's authority to interfere with all private associations, including the family," warned constitutional lawyer John Whitehead.

Whitehead, president of the Virginia-based Rutherford Institute, made the statement in connection with a case involving a teacher who charged Dayton Christian Schools (DCS) with sex discrimination for refusing to renew her contract after she became pregnant. As explained in a letter from DCS principal James Rakestraw, "As a school, we see the importance of the mother in the home during the early years of child growth."

After learning that she would not be rehired, Linda Hoskinson threatened leagal action. DCS then fired her for

I am the rose of Sharon, and the lily of the valleys

As the lily among thorns, so is my love among the daughters.

As the apply tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloved among the sons. I sat down under his shadow with great delight, and his fruit was sweet to my taste.

He brought me to the banqueting house, and is banner over me was love.

Stay with me flagons, comfort me with apples: for I am sick of love.

His left hand is under my head, and his right hand doth embrace me.

I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, by the roes, and by the hinds of the field, that ye stir up, nor awake my love, till he please.

The voice of my beloved! behold, he cometh leaping upon the mountains, skipping upon the hills.

My beloved is like a roe or a young hart: behold, he standeth behind our wall, he looketh forth at the windows, shewing himself through the lattice.

My beloved spake, and said unto me, Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away.

For, lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone;

The flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land;

The fig tree putteth forth her green figs, nad the vines with the tender grape give a good smell. Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away.

A Free Man at Last

Anatoly Borisovich Shcharansky

WEST BERLIN, Feb. 11 — It is a rare man who can make a joke of his imminent arrest, and Anatoly B. Shcharansky is such a man.

Man in the News

On March 15, 1977, he was sitting with two American correspondents in the Gorky Street apartment of a Moscow friend Vladimir S. Slepak, who, like Mr. Shcharansky, had applied for and been refused an exit visa to emigrate to Israel. Mr. Shcharansky sensed that he was about to be seized; all signs pointed to it.

Eleven days before, he had been accused in the Government newspaper Izvestia of passing secrets to the Central Intelligence Agency. A roommate of his, Dr. Sanya Lipavsky, had turned out to an agent of the K.G.B., the security police, rather than the dissident he had pretended he was.

Since the Izvestia accusation, the K.G.B. had put men all over Mr. Shcharansky, following him ostentatiously wherever he went. The likelihood that this was a prelude to arrest sapped him of his usual good cheer at times, and he would drift into somber moments, weakened by dread. Then, invariably, he would recover his sprightly wit. This he did on the day of his arrest.

Seeing for Themselves

The correspondents were asking him what it was like to be constantly followed. Mr. Shcharansky replied impishly that they should see for themselves; he would give them a graphic illustration. So they all put on their overcoats and headed out the door.

In the hallway, two plainclothesmen watched them emerge, then squeezed into the elevator with them. On the ground floor, other agents took over, blocking the correspondents and hustling Mr. Shcharansky into a waiting sedan.

Nobody thought that his plan to toy with the K.G.B. had anything to do with his arrest, which was part of a broad effort to discredit the Jewish emigration movement. But Mr. Shcharansky's prank was typical of his ability to meet adversity with a slice of wry humor. More than a year later, for example, at the opening of his trial in July 1978, he spotted his brother, Leonid, in the courtroom, flashed him a big grin and cracked: "Oh! You got fat!"

How this seemingly resilient sense of humor has withstood nine years of arduous imprisonment will soon be known. Reports through the years, from his mother, Ida P. Milgrom, portray him as stubborn about his innocence, even rejecting a Soviet suggestion at one point that he request a pardon on grounds of ill health. He had suffered from severe headaches, poor vision and chest pain, but he was said to have regarded an application for a pardon as tantamount to an admission of guilt.

In the last week, some friends even speculated that if he knew in advance that he was to be released as part of an exchange of spies, he might balk to avoid giving the impression that he was one of them.

Born in the Ukraine

Anatoly Borisovich Shcharansky was born on Jan. 20, 1948, in the Ukraine. His father was a Communist Party member and a journalist on a party newspaper. Later, he moved with his family to Istra, northwest of Moscow, where his mother still lives; his father died of a heart attack several years ago on a bus en route to a birthday party for Anatoly, in absentia. His brother, Leonid, lives in Moscow with his wife, Iraida, and their children.

Two Black Americans, One Not Telling The Truth , And One Suffering

Bill Moyers did not deserve what happened to him last week.

The "CBS Reports" special on "The Vanishing Family -- Crisis in Black America" was thorough, fair, in good taste and a much needed piece of public service. Moyers, as corespondent/narrator was superb, as usual. Moyers, the person, is also decent and non-racist.

But Moyers was restrained as Moyers-the-commentator, the man with good insightful nuggets of wisdom. It reflected, I suspect, the network's nervousness about the subject. "Will we be accussed of racism if we present the facts?"

"Yes" was probably the conclusion because a perfectly brillant documentary, produced by Ruth Streeter, was followed by a panel of four Black experts for "balance." It didn't.

The film presented the real experts -- those living this night-mare of family disintegration and hopelessness and those who have stayed behind in the ghettos to service them. Of the panel experts, only the police chief offered first-hand reality and solutions.

Moyers, who knew the answers to his questions, asked them of a panel that sidestepped them. Because he was White and they were Black and he did not want to be called a racist, he let them get away with it.

Moyers proved that he is also a victim of racism. CBS's excellent contribution to the understanding of the threatening problem of Black teenage pregnancy was rejected by the public and landed in 64th place in the ratings, near the absolute bottom.

America doesn't care about this problem--but they will soon. What this family pathology is producing is young women and men who just don't care. They destroy themselves. And you might guess where that puts you. Moyers knows this--and Moyers cares.

But to become really effective, he'll have to get over his fears of being called a racist and CBS will have to get up enought nerve to let the pieces fall where they may. And to assume that Blacks will be offended by the truth is a racist assumption.

I felt no pride watching these Black men boast of impregnating women to demonstrate their "strong sperm" or satisfy their "highly sexed" nature. Or to point blank explain that these babies were the responsibility of the government and society to support.

The young women were just as disgusting. Lovesick and stupid is about the most subtle explanation that I can give. And the great problem is that no one--I mean no one-is saying this to them.

We who are Black and middle class are mostly to blame. We ran away from poor Blacks as soon as we could afford it. Then, out of guilt and our own class and social self-interests, we conspired to hide the breakdown in morals and ethics that were caused by the vacuum created by the absence of our influence.

Quite frankly, two Black Americas came into existence. Our civil rights began to mean the right to accuse any White who told the truth of racism and any Black who violated the conspiracy of "tomming."

The threat is still there, however. By year 2000, 14 years from now, 70 percent of all Black children will be born in a household to a child-mother. Over 70 percent of Black men will be unemployed.

That is a statistical description of a jungle, not a community. Babies and mothers are damaged: poor education, physical defects, mental and emotional handicaps. Guaranteed poverty for life, with racism as an overlay to protect their "rights" to live this lifestyle.

Television and moveis are their new electronic sex manuals. Of course, no one gets pregnant on TV or in the movies. Records teach more sex. "You Give Good Love" by Whitney Houston won the prize for the top single record at this year's American Music Awards. By 2000, the winner may be "You Give Good Dog." The United States of Gomorrah is at hand.

Middle class Urban League slogans ("If you can't be a father, don't make a baby!") to "strong sperm" street dudes who never learned the basic premise for the statement simply has middle class Blacks talking to themselves.

"Strong Sperm" should go to jail unless he supports the results of his "highly sexed" nature. If he doesn't have the money, he should work it off and pay society back, with his sweat. This will provide him with a sublimated sexual outlet. And this kind of sexual stimulation is good for all of us.

An economic disincentive should also be made available for the girls who need to keep "Strong Sperm" with their pregancies. Stop setting them up in private apartments and house them in dormitories.

Support the babies in communal/Head Start programs which will give them love and a sense of right and wrong while teaching them to read, write and count.

Among Black teen girls, about 22 percent have a second child and 7 percent give birth to a third. For each pregnancy after the first, increase her obligations to society. Her welfare payments can be adjusted to her morality.

And it is morality that we are talking about. But, like the rest of us, laws keep us honest. Moreover, financial incentives make us work.

So it is with the poor and Black and young. They simply need a good dose of reality.

State Reorganization Bill Gets Committe Approval

(Olympia) Major legislation to give the governor responsibility for three key state agencies won approval of a Senate Committee and soon will come before the full Senate.

Senator Win Granlund is prime sponsor of Senate Bill 4875 to give the governor direct authority to appoint the directors of the Departments of Transportation and Game and the Parks and Recreation Commission. The authority is a top priority request of Governor Booth Gardner.

Granlund said transferring the authority of the three agencies directly to the governor will result in "greater accountability and better service."

Currently, all three agencies are directed by a group of commissioners who hire the director for the day-to-day operation. The commissioners are appointed by the governor, but are not otherwise responsible to the chief executive of the state.

"When something goes wrong with any of these three agencies, the people blame the governor, and turn to him for a solution," Granlund said. "But the governor's hands are tied because he has no control over the commissions."

The 26th District Senator added, "no one really knows who the commissioners are, and they have no real responsiblity to the public. We need the person elected as governor to have the authority to make these commissions responsive."

The reorganization measure, which was approved Thursday by the Governmental Operations Committee, is expected to reach the Senate floor sometime before Tuesday, February 18, when the Senate must concentrate on House bills.

Don't Be Misled By Those Who Ridicule Comparable Worth

A short time ago, both Houses of the Legislature approved a landmark comparable worth agreement that ended threats of further legal action by the state employees union and provided a schedule for implementing a law we passed three years ago. That apparently reasonable action has sparked a great amount of debate, and an even larger amount of confusion and misinformation.

In the days preceding the decision, opponents often criticized the state for settling a lawsuit they believed we had won, setting aside the obvious merits of paying people what they are worth.

In fact, the history of the comparable worth issue in Washington is one that should make us proud that we are putting our commitment to fair pay and its implementation in writing.

Equal pay for equal work -- the principle of paying the same salary to people doing the exact same job -- well established, but it is only part of the answer. Historically, our society has paid those jobs traditionally performed by women less than other jobs of comparable difficulty and responsibility. That's an inequity the Legislature set out to correct in 1983 when we decided, with bipartisan support, that the state should implement a comparable worth pay scale by 1993.

Although the state employees union was suing the state over that very issue, resulting in Jack Tanner's decision in favor of the union, the lawsuit and the statute should never been confused with one another.

The state's policy and the union's demands continued to be in essential agreement; the only real questions were how fast the law would be implemented, and whether back pay should be awarded.

The legal battle was not ended when a three-member panel of the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals overturned Tanner's original decision. The union requested a review by the entire court, and the court appeared to be seriously considering such a review. If successful, the union's efforts could still have left us holding the bill for several years of back pay.

That's why the negotiations continued, and that's why we ratified the tentative agreement reached by the state and the union last December -- an agreement that will cost less than $500 million over the course of the next six years.

What exactly does that agreement say? It says that we will implement the law that has been on the books since 1983. It says that no back pay will be demanded, and it says that only those jobs determined to be paid less than they are worth will receive comparable worth increases. Some opponents are calling that a victory for the union. It's really a victory for the state, and all those of us who support pay equity.

Don't be misled by those who ridicule comparable worth. The evaluation system used in the original study, commissioned by Republican Gov. Dan Evans in 1974, has been used to extensively in private industry.

To be honest, I'm disturbed by the fact that the issue has become a partisan one. Comparable worth, which passed the House with 77 votes in 1983, has not always been subject to the political winds. Even today, several members of the minority party support it, and five Republican House members voted to ratify the agreement. And that's appropriate, because comparable worth is really a question of fairness, not politics. And it's about time we made our answer to the question clear.

How Much Life Insurance Is Enough?

Too many people think that buying life insurance is a separate process from making investment decisions, but, in fact, it's one of the most important investments they'll ever make. As a result, they spend most of their time figuring out what kind of insurance to buy instead of focusing first on the most important decision: How much insurance do I really need?

To find the answer to that key question, take a bit of time to think about what the short - and long-term financial needs of your dependent survivors are likely to be. Then take stock of your available financial resources - securities investments, survivor pension benefits, Social Security, home equity, existing group insurance from your employer and college funds. You need only enough life insurance to make up the deficit between your estimate of your survivors' needs and your existing current financial resources. That's why your life insurance decisions and your investment decisions are linked -- not separate.

One of the most important uses of insurance is to meet the short-term needs of dependent survivors such as: uninsured medical costs, funeral expenses, lawyer's fees to settle an estate and debts, including taxes. The cash proceeds from insurance policies owned by beneficiaries go quickly into the hands of those beneficiaries. They can then use the funds to meet all the special expenses that arise immediately after a person's death and before an estate clears the probate process. The availability of cash also help survivors, or an executor, make sensible investment decisions without the pressure to liquidate holdings for cash.

Young single people, who often do not buy life insurance because they have no dependents, should consider that, at a minimum, immediate expenses can amount to about $5,000 and should be provided for in some way.

Over a little longer term, make sure there are funds available for a period of readjustment for a surviving family. A good rule of thumb is to provide the equivalent of three to five years of the lost after-tax income of each major wage earner in the household. Another need is to replace the household and childcare services provided by another working or nonworking member of the family for the three to five year period. Add another possibility: Enough life insurance to pay off the mortgage to reduce the family's housing expenses and make sure the house or condominium won't have to be sold at a distressed price.

Over a longer term, a common rule of thumb is that a family needs at least 60% of the former after-tax income of a principal income producer to get along at all. And it needs at least 75% of that former income to maintain its standard of living. So, after taking into account the funds needed by survivors for the short term and for the readjustment fund, see what would be left of your current investment portfolio and cash resources. That's the capital fund that will have to provide a steady stream of income for your dependents -- and it may have to be beefed up with life insurance to do the job.

These are general guidelines. Your personal life insurance needs may require more or less extensive analysis, depending on such factors as mortgage balance on primary residence, current large debts, anticipated expenses for funeral and legal services, current liquid assets, and more.

The important point is that when you're evaluating your investments and comparing them to your needs and goals, don't overlook your insurance investments. If necessary, ask your Financial Consultant to help you appraise them and help you develop a total investment plan.

Rep. Bill Smitherman Says "It's A Myth That People On Welfare Don't Want To Work"

OLYMPIA -- Providing work to help welfare recipients get out of the cycle they're caught in is Rep. Bill Smitherman's goal in sponsoring HB 1505, which has passed out of the House Ways & Means Committee.

"It's a myth that people on welfare don't want to work," Smitherman said. "What we have to do is make the system stop rewarding them for not working. We have to give them a choice."

The bill would develop a series of grant diversion projects allowing welfare recipients to transfer money received from the state to a wage pool. The pool would be used to supplement wages paid by private employers.

"This proposal meets three important goals -- welfare reform, economic development and government efficiency," said the Tacoma Democrat. "We would be reducing unemployment by helping people go to work, while also reducing inef[illegible] in the administration of human services and employment programs."

The Employment Partnership Program would create the pilot projects, in cooperation with the Department of Social and Health Services and the Department of Employment Security.

Smitherman said the bill could simultaneously reduce unemployment and welfare caseloads, which would help both the state and people receiving public assistance.

"This would be a voluntary program, and no one currently employed would lost their job as a result of the program," said Smitherman. He pointed out that the projects would have to follow specific criteria.

Wages would start at $5.00 per hour at least, depending on the job, and they could be increased after six month. Employers would also have to provide at least 50 percent of the matching funds.

The projects, which would be targeted towards those hardest-to-employ, would also provide job placements with promotional opportunities and certain support services such as daycare and transportation.

Grants would also be diverted for start-up or retention of worker-owned businesses if a business plan is completed on the proposed business and the project gains the approval of the loan committee of Washington's development loan fund.

"We need this bill," said Smitherman. "It would provide jobs for people without any additional cost to the state. It would do us a lot of good."

discipline, and discharge its teachers is...to interfere with the church's preaching and teaching mission. If there is any inviolable principle of the religion clauses (of the First Amendment), it is that the state must absolutely avoid involvement in matters touching religious doctrine."

These arguments parrallel those of the U.S. Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit, which ruled in June 1985 that granting the OCRC jurisdiction over employment discrimination charges would result in "an excessive state/church entaglement." The court recognized "the fact that religious considerations pervade the hiring scheme employed by DCS." The OCRC appealed that decision.

Whitehead called this case "one of the most important to come before the Supreme Court" because of the philosophical principles that could affect much more than just this one school and teacher.

The brief explains that granting the OCRC jurisdiction over a religious association would affirm the concept that associational rights have no inherent value apart from the ## Kerry Fannin Chosen To Participate In "Leaders Project!

Kerry Fannin, coordinator of Fort Steilacoom Community College's Displaced Homemaker program, is one of 160 women in management chosen nationwide to participate in the "Leaders Project," an international leadership training program for two-year college women administrators.

Designed to help women to improve the skills they will need to assume major decision-making roles in two year institutions, the 6-month project pairs participants with mentors at their colleges to work on research projects that will aid their institutions.

Fannin, who works at Fort Steilacoom's Eastern Extension in Puyallup, has developed a project for forecasting community college educational needs in the Puyallup Valley. She will contact individuals at the state and local level who are actively involved in economic development with individual companies in the area to determine their needs for employee training, and make recommendations for curriculum growth or revision at the Extension Center.

Participants were chosen for their interest in advancement in two-year college administration and the quality of their proposed project to develop new skills as well as benefit their home institution.

Those selected will also receive instruction and practice in supervisory and human relations skills, finance and budgeting, employee relations and labor management. The program also includes discussions with national experts on the issues confronting two-year colleges during the next 15 years.

The project is sponsored by the League for Innovation in Community Colleges, a consortium of community college districts in the U.S. and Canada, and by the American Association of Women in Community and Junior Colleges. The program is being conducted by the Institute for Leadership Development at Rio Salado Community College in Phoenix, Arizona.

Puyallup Nation

for a God's people.

The native Americans and descendents of native Americans are not afraid to speak out for their rights although in doing so sometime they lost more rights. But history has always proven that righteous faults and righteous action will always win over evil contentions whereby, we believe that all men and women of goodwill, regardless of race or creed or color, will applause the heroic action that was taken by the Puyallup tribal people.

As one of concerns for human rights we call on the U.S. Government to restore the land rights of the Puyallup tribal people in according with the Medicine Creek Treaty that the U.S. Government sanctioned along with the Indian Chiefs. They should hereby, instead of trying to buy the tribal birth right issue grants that will lift the Puyallup tribal people from their property level and give them the right to administer their own lands that they, after centuries of living in disgrace because of the occupation of their lands will again be restored with self-honor and dignity as their God-given inheritance.

Cab Calloway's Cotton Club Lands In Tacoma

In 1931 the center of the jazz world was a club on 142nd Street and Lennox Avenue in Harlem. Its leader was a 24-year-old bandleader, dancer, singer and comedian, the "Hi-De-Ho" man. The music was hot, the musicians, dancers and singers even hotter. Thanks to a nightly transcontinental radio broadcast, Cab Calloway and the Cotton Club became American legends.

Nine years later swing was the thing. Calloway left to front a dance band and the Cotton Club (which prohibited dancing) closed its doors for good.

Now the irresistible combination, Cab Calloway and the Cotton Club, is back. And you don't have to take a "A" Train uptown to Harlem to get there. At 71, Cab Calloway is still singing and dancing in a musical revue called Cab Calloway's Cotton Club Revisited. This February 27 and 28 at 8:00p.m. Cab will bring his show to the Pantages Centre.

Reserved tickets for Cab Calloway's Cotton Club Revisited are $26.50, $22.50 and $19.00 for adults, and $23.75, $19.50 and $26.50 for students and senior citizens (over 62). $4.00 tickets for any remaining seats will be available on the performance day -- February 27 or 28 -- for students and seniors.

Tickets are available at the Pantages Centre, 901 Broadway in Tacoma and at all Ticketmaster outlets. For ticket and event information or to order tickets by telephone call 591-5894, noon to 6:00p.m., Monday through Saturday. Mail and phone orders are subject to $1.50 per ticket handling charge. Tickets purchased at the Pantages Centre Ticket office for this event are not subject to a handling charge. All ticket sales are final - no refunds or exchanges.
